What are class two making?!

Something Egyptians related with pringle tubes—watch this space. They have also been busy writing colour based poetry after studying What is Pink by C Kossetti, and multiplication using the grid method; have Class 2 been busy using times table rockstars at home?

Class one have been reading the fabulous book Iggy Peck Architect and thinking about the materials Iggy used to build with. In maths there's been some wonderful multiplication using arrays and counting patterns— good work Class 1. The children have had a great time exploring building materials, making a collage and a plasticine house tile. They are looking beautiful, photo next week!

There has been much enthusiasm amongst some of class three this week as they have been making their children's books from earlier this term. The class have also been brushing up on their time skills in maths, using analogue, digital and 24hour clocks. Extending last week's work on dissolving, the children have been investigating the effect of temperature on the dissolving process.

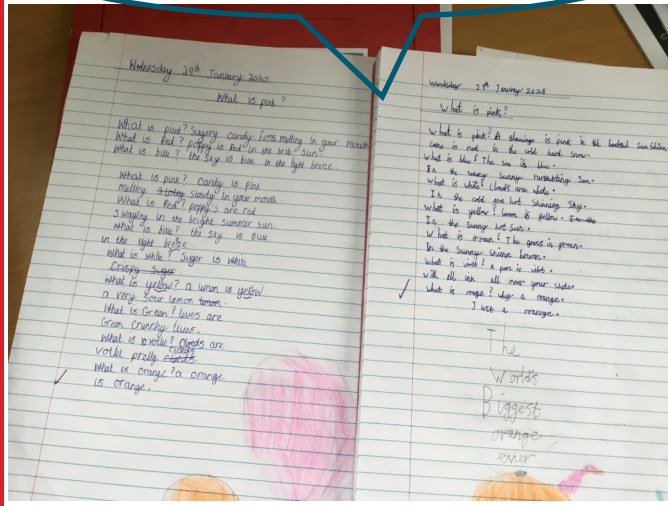

Informal letter writing was class three's literature task this week, and I'm confident that your efforts will be very gratefully received.

Ask your children whether they're participating in the new table tennis club. Well done Torrin and Raef who are leading the club.

All the children participating in the Dance Festival are rehearsing well, with special thanks to Lucy, Isabel and Kate. Mr Spillsby was very pleased with your progress this week and you'll look great in your super t shirts on the night. Parents please send outstanding ticket money.

Beautiful poetry Class 2, keep it up

After half term sandwiches and wraps will be offered alongside the daily hot school meals options.

If you would like to order these please choose ham, cheese, tuna or egg (tuna & egg will be made with mayonnaise unless otherwise specified) and order by the Monday of the week before they'll be eaten.

On the day children will be also be offered fruit, cheese and a desert.
