Class Two have been conducting sound experiments and explaining how sound travels, including making and testing their own string telephones; does this bring back any memories parents?! In literacy the children have been studying the features of non-chronological reports, drawing a spider diagram and turning notes into sentences. Fractions of amounts and calculating equivalent fractions has been the maths focus this week.

Things got somewhat explosive in class three this week as the children experimented mixing vinegar or lemon juice and bicarbonate of soda, as well as burning things in search of first hand knowledge of irreversible reactions! Don't worry Mr Tinker, the classroom remains intact! In maths the class have been problem solving and this week's writing focus has been inspired by Michael Morpurgo's book Private Peaceful.

Look out families, Class One are busy measuring length and weight, sorry if everyone's now a target! There may also be much discussion around famous buildings since the children have really enjoyed researching amazing facts and information about buildings around the world.

Mrs Lockley is very proud of the standards of writing amongst many of Class One pupils this week, including some brilliant poetry about buildings and some insightful book reviews marking world book day. Well Done!

Thank You to everyone who has donated beautiful books to the school library.

This week if anyone has anything by Enid Blyton we'd be very grateful
